Useful information about payment terminals: “ep2” vs “non-ep2”

The payment terminals offered in Switzerland are quite varied – and not just in terms of what they are used for. The devices also differ in terms of whether or not they have implemented the Swiss ep2 standard. This is reflected in the designations “ep2” and “non-ep2”. Here’s the difference:

- “ep2”-certified payment terminals have implemented both the international security standards and the Swiss “ep2” standard for cashless payments and, in addition to international cards such as Mastercard, the terminals can also process domestic cards such as the PostFinance Card or Lunch-Check, Reka cards, etc.
- The “non-ep2” payment terminals such as SumUp and myPOS have only implemented the international security standards and can therefore only process cards of international brands such as Visa and Mastercard.
